University employee salaries are presented

By Cathy Crist

The University has been under crucial times for the past five weeks. With the budget being cut 10 percent and salaries of administration, faculty and staff receiving no increase, The Missourian has taken the opportunity to publish public records.

This public service consists of the publication of all University employee salaries for the 1980-1981 year. These figures do not include summer session salaries for faculty during the 1980-1981 fiscal year.

The source of this information is the N.W.M.S.U. Personnel Budget Report as released by the University upon the request of The Northwest Missourian.

This information is public record and is accessible to any citizen of the state of Missouri. Public record laws assure that citizens have access to information in the public interest.

University employees, as public servants to the state of Missouri, are subject to these public record laws.

Rains help crops

Nodaway crops look good

Timely rains last weekend have given a big boost to crops in Nodaway County, Vilas Young, director of the Nodaway County Extension Agency, said.

"The crops look good but we still need more rain," Young said. "We're going to need timely rains in August and September to insure a good crop."

Young said last weekend's rains recharged the topsoil, but several weeks of rainy weather are needed to recharge the subsoil.

Rainfall amounts for the weekend varied with some spots in Nodaway County reporting from 4 to 6 inches of rain.

Young said the weather this week has been ideal for corn and soybean pollination.

The 100-degree temperatures we experienced at this critical period last year were devastating to crops, Young said. The high temperatures accompanied by high winds last year dried up much of the pollen and blew it away.

The ideal temperatures for pollination are below 90 to 95 degrees, Young said.

The wind and hard rains of last weekend caused some problems with lodged corn and erosion in some parts of the County, Young said.

"The worst damage was in the Northwest corner of the county around Clearmont," Young said. "Some corn leaned over pretty badly in the high winds."

Young said this has been a bad year for insect problems.

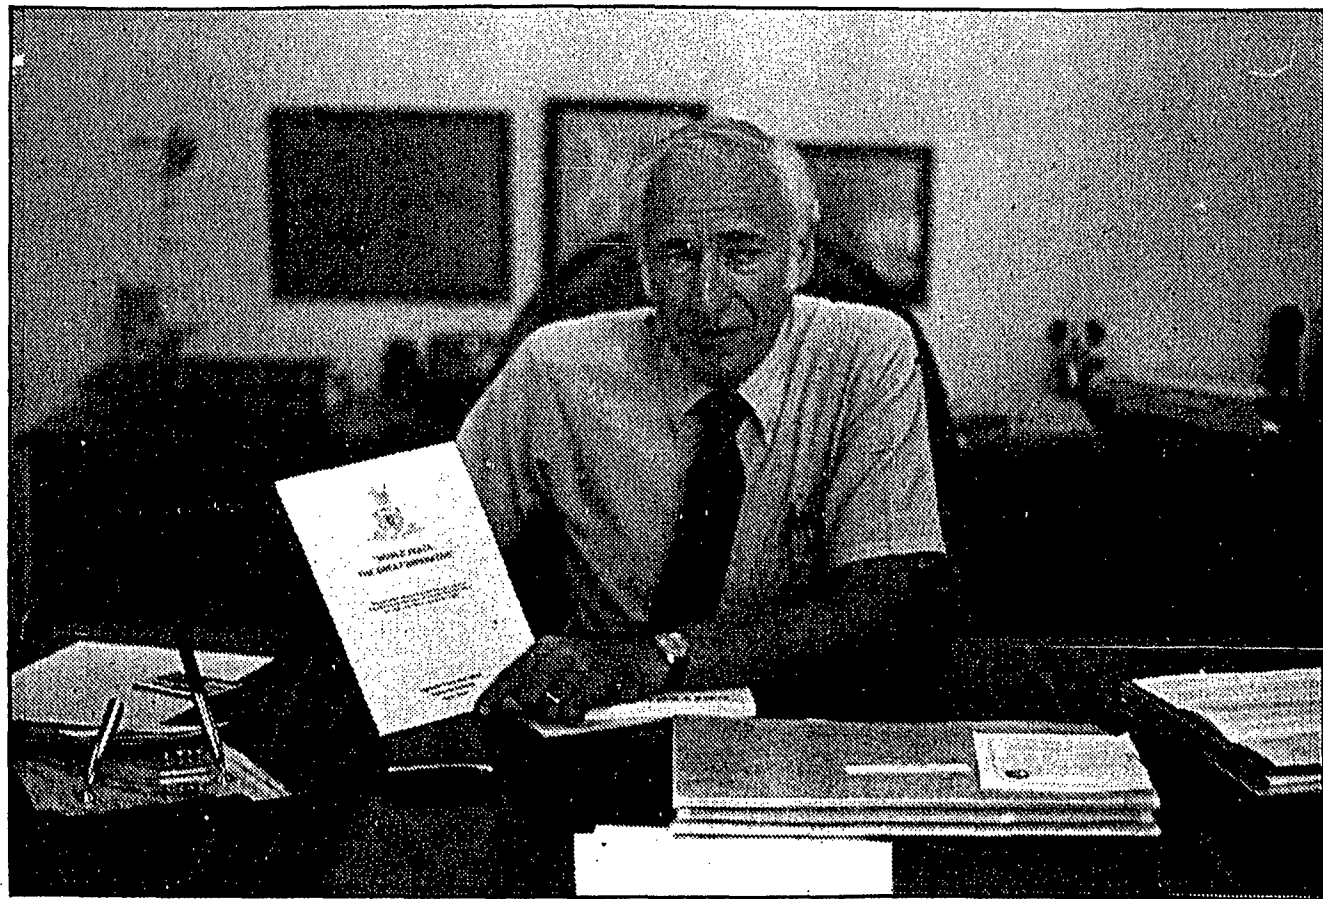

"Insects have had a field day this year," he said. "That's probably because we had a mild winter,"

Young cited chinch bugs as a larger problem this year than in the past because more wheat is being grown here now. They feed on the wheat and move into other crops when the wheat is harvested.

Damage to corn from corn root worm and dog beetles has been minimal so far because of sufficient rainfall, he said.

Young said if the weather turns dry there is a potential for much damage to crops from grasshoppers. As long as the vegetation in the fence rows stays green, the grasshoppers won't move into the row crops, he said.

The National Weather Service is calling for partly cloudy skies with chances for scattered showers and thunderstorms through Saturday. Sunday's forecast is for clearing skies with seasonable temperatures.

Northwest's President, B.D. Owens, has returned from a five-day conference in Costa Rica.

Owens was sponsored by the Costa Rican government to attend a worldwide conference of university presidents, held in San Jose. The purpose of the conference was to discuss the establishment of a university for peace in Costa Rica. The Costa Rican government proposed the idea of a university for peace to the United Nations who approved the idea.

Owens was one of 250 university presidents from around the world to be invited to attend the conference.

"I was invited through the International Association of University Presidents, an organization that I belong to," Owens said. "The Costa Rican government paid for the trip."

Owens said the Costa Rican government and the United Nations feel that world peace will be a very critical and essential aspect in the coming years. They feel that education of peace should be stressed in institutions of higher learning.

The Costa Rican president, Rodrigo Carazo, and officials of the university met to discuss possible curriculums for the institution.

Owens said that Carazo said the Government of Costa Rica has decided to make peace the center of its international policy. Costa Rica has abolished its army and has made every effort to seek peace through law.

Owens said that a good communications department would be a vital part of the institution's curriculum.

Owens said that in Carazo's address to the conference, the university would be a great center of higher learning. The primary objective of the university would be to contribute, through research, teaching, dissemination and free inquiry, to the cause of peace, to mutual knowledge for men throughout the world and to the promotion among all men of spirit of understanding, tolerance and peaceful coexistence, in order to stimulate international co-operation and eliminate any situation which could imperil universal peace and progress.

"I feel the university for peace is a remarkable

Missourian takes initiative to answer public questions

Many people during the past several weeks have asked about salaries at Northwest Missouri State University. Many have not known where to look or were afraid to ask the appropriate people for this information.

Such information, in a public, tax-supported institution, is a matter of public record. Any citizen of the state of Missouri has a right to this information upon request. Citizens have a right to know how their tax monies are being spent so that they might evaluate the operation of their government and related institutions.

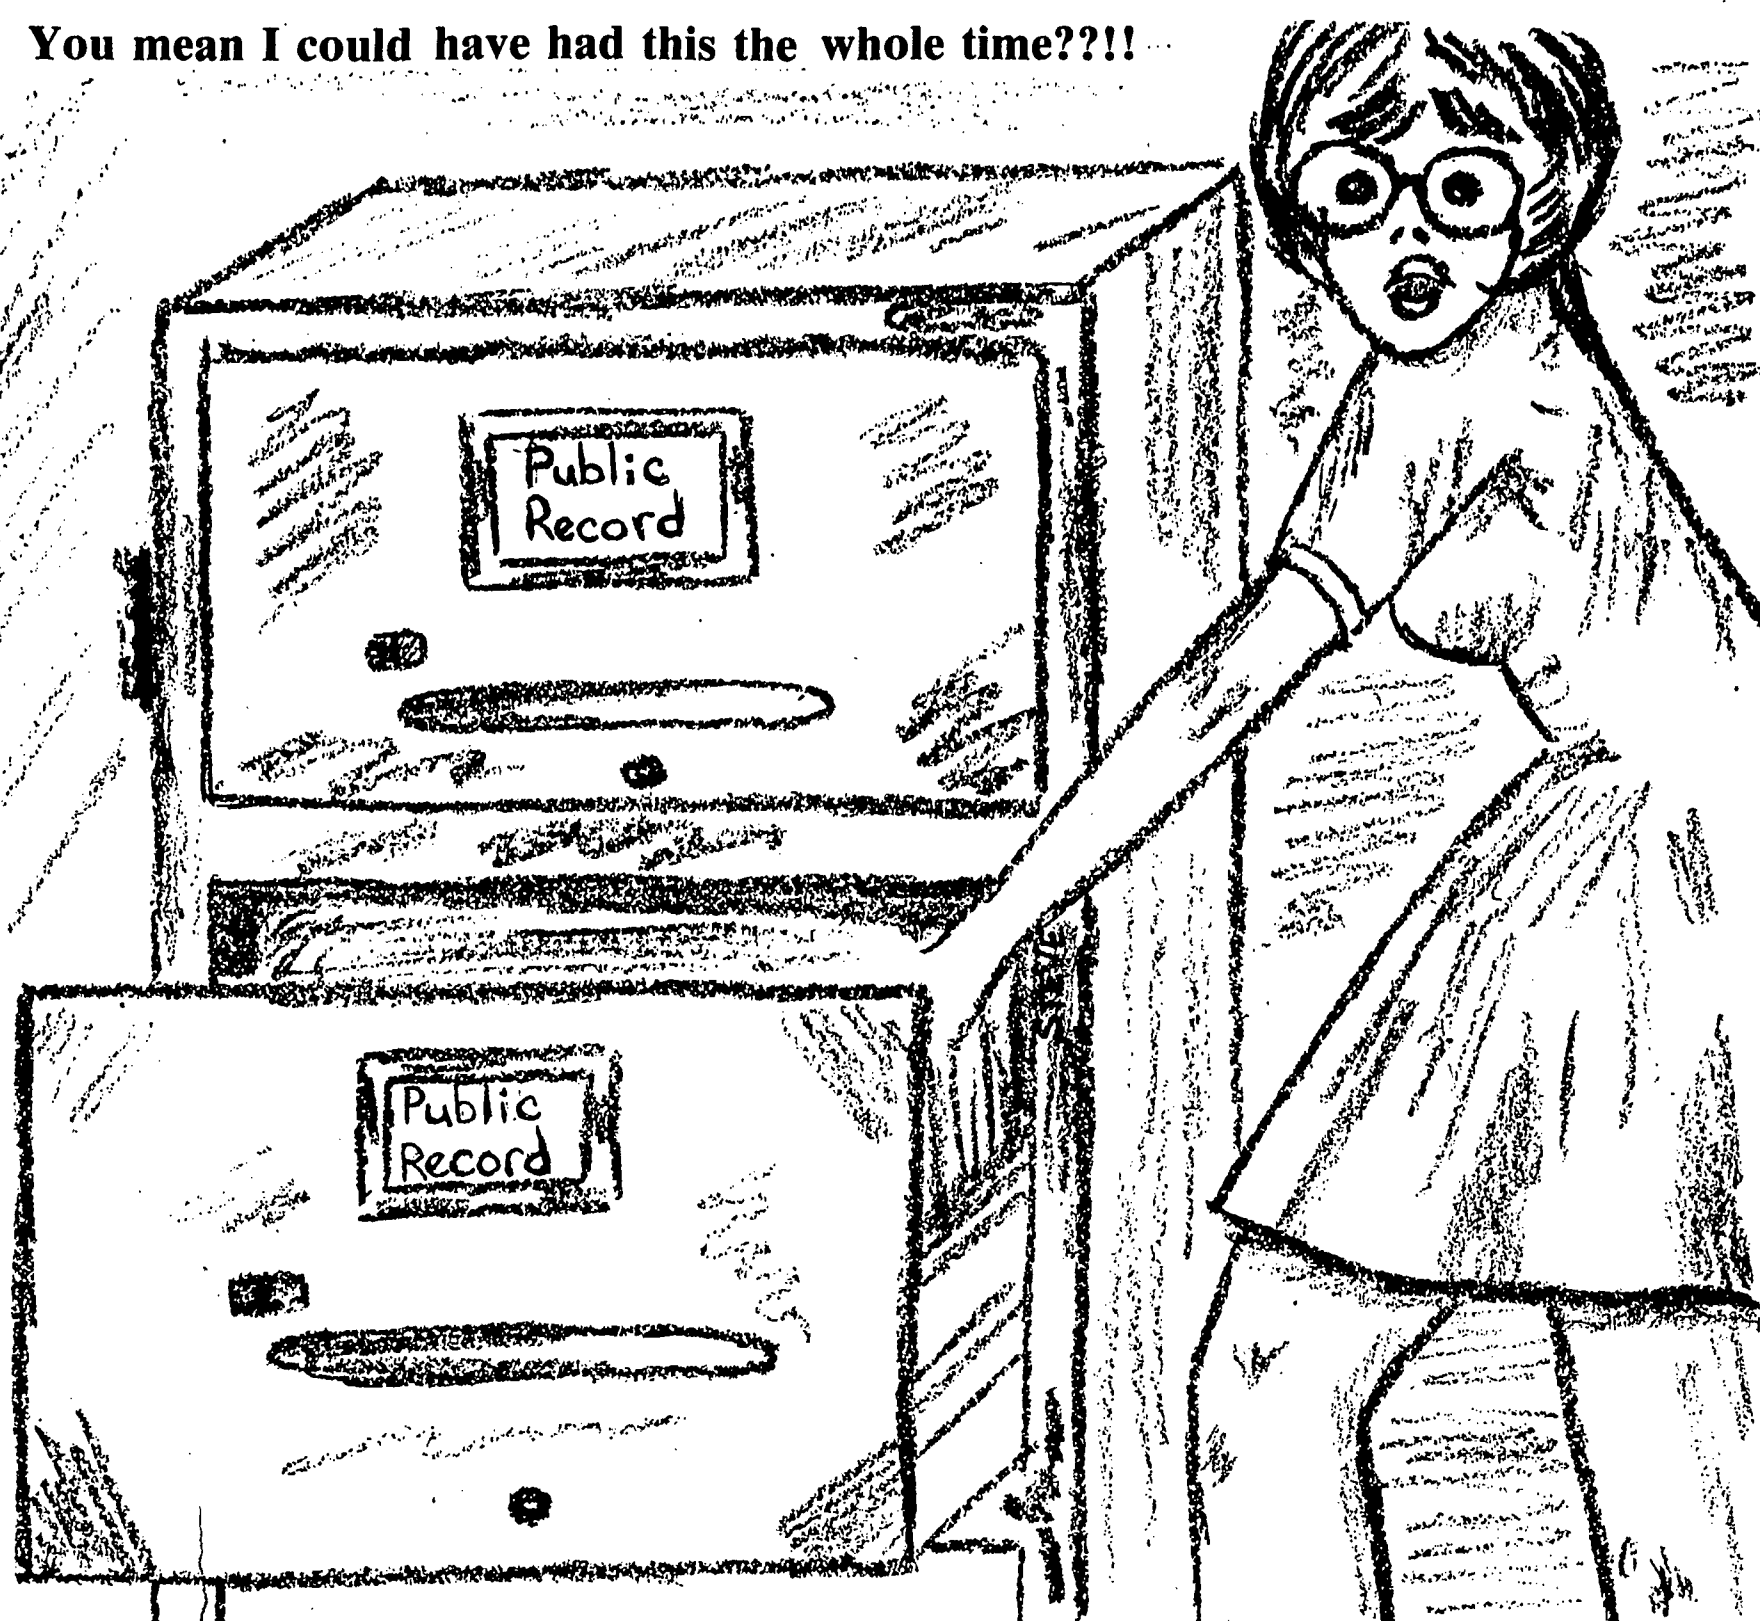

Citizens should not fear any stigma attached to asking for such information. It is their concern.

Such public record includes many different types of information. Citizens have a vested interest in the activities of such public servants as the police, city and county government, the judicial system and all other areas of local, state and federal government.

People should take the initiative more often to learn about decisions and policies that affect everyone.

You mean I could have had this the whole time??!!

The Stroller follows strike pattern

Your Stroller has been working on a new contract for himself and is getting ready to present it to the management of this paper. Your hero is just simply not paid enough.

I know that your man is so much of a tradition on this campus that he's almost as dear to your heart as Mom and apple pie, but apparently traditions aren't so sacred anymore.

This summer has been pure agony for your man. He's always been so fond of kicking back in front of the boob tube and watching a Sunday afternoon baseball game with jungle juice in hand.

Unfortunately, America's number one pastime has uttered a nasty five-letter word--STRIKE!

Now why should we the fans become victims to such torture?

Last fall, your hero was able to cheer the Kansas City Royals on to the World Series. Who cares that they lost? The important thing was that they got there.

This year, the stands are empty, much less a chance that there will be a World Series. All hope is lost for 1981.

Your man has been suffering from massive withdrawal symptoms. It starts with a cold sweat on the forehead to a paralysis in the voice box and concludes with a TV set that has been smashed in by your hero's size nines.

Your man needs, in fact demands, to have a baseball team to cheer on. But, who is he but just a peon lost in the populace of America?

Now there has even been talk of a postal strike. Don't even utter such a thing. Why your hero couldn't receive his fan mail or his weekly TV Guide.

It has come to your hero's attention that life is a maze of dependence on other people and that we live in a new age. It's time to stand up and be counted, although your man does so somewhat timidly.

Your Stroller has suffered long enough, and it's time that the management stops trodding him underfoot.

A one-man union is hard to support, but it's the American way. If the baseball players and postal workers, two tried and true American traditions, can make demands, so can your man.

If worse comes to worse, I suppose your hero could get himself a horse and start his own Pony Express, the postal workers can play ball and Bowie Kuhn can write this column.

But, there is always a but, the whole American populace could just go out on strike and then no one would have to worry about keeping up with the Jones' anymore.

We would all be back in the pioneer days, making it on our own and then the cycle could start all over again.

Now here is a list of your hero's demands:

1. A private office with wall to wall carpeting, a private phone extension and a mahogany desk.

2. An expense account to cover all strolling activities.

3. A bicycle to take the load off your hero's feet while in the process of strolling.

4. A 10 percent salary increase. (Don't let that fool you, but for certain your hero is never going to let you know how much HE makes!)

5. Free room and board while pursuing the duties of the neighborhood stroller.

6. A refrigerator for storage of cool beverages, both in his office and at his place of residence.

7. No more of this weekly writing for a column. Creativity is an art, and it doesn't need to be abused, therefore I propose a bi-weekly column.

8. An experienced secretary.

9. A panel of expert consultants to help write this column.

10. Unless these demands are met, your hero will go on strike as of midnight, Aug. 1, 1981.

Editor's note: In next week's paper, we will be featuring a new stroller. As is always the case, this one will remain anonymous. The last stroller just got too greedy.

Dear Editor:

How thoughtful of B.D. Scott to inform the readers of "Letters to the Editor" that "...the generally high quality of instruction is the one attribute that has kept this institution going the last couple of years..."!

Somehow, I had the impression that there must also be other vital functions which keep a university open.

Miller to leave ; Colt to gain position

Sandy Miller, head athletic trainer at Northwest Missouri State University, has resigned to take a similar position at Steven F. Austin State University in Nacagadoches, Texas.

Dave Colt, who did his graduate work in athletic training under Miller, has been hired to replace Miller effective August 1.

Miller made the decision last week and said that he was not out looking for a job.

"I wasn't looking for a job," Miller said. "They called me and asked me if I wanted the job."

There were two reasons that aided in Miller's decision in making the move to Texas and to a larger university.

"I feel that this is a good opportunity to move for my family and for myself," he said. "They have a good training program, and undergraduate students can actually major in this area."

Miller said that the money did not play a big part in his decision.

Steven F. Austin is a NAIA school this year, and next year they will be a NAIA-NCAA school.

At Northwest, Miller was the head athletic trainer for all sports. He also instructed in the physical education department.

Miller's duties at Steven F. Austin will basically remain the same, except he will head up a program that can have undergraduates major in athletic training. Miller said the women will be a trainer, but he will be totally in charge.

Miller regrets leaving Maryville but he feels that the move south is a move that will benefit both his family and himself.

"I do feel like it is a good career move for me," Miller said. "It is a step upward in my career."

Miller said that Maryville has been good to him.

"I would like to thank the coaches in the P.E. department and the administration for all of their support during my time here," he said.

Athletic director Richard Flanagan said that Miller would be hard to replace.

"Sandy will be greatly missed," Flanagan said. "He was the type of person that did his job quietly, and you would never know that he was around."

The new athletic trainer at Northwest, Dave Colt, was previously the assistant athletic trainer at Temple University.

Colt is originally from Buffalo, New York. He gained his undergraduate degree from the University of West Virginia. He received his masters' from Northwest in 1978 and has been at Temple since.

"Dave Colt will do a very good job," Flanagan said. "He has experience from the standpoint of the athletes."

Since he worked at Northwest on his masters, Colt is familiar with Northwest and the surrounding area.

"The year he was here will help him understand our program, goals and philosophy," Miller said. "He knows a lot of the coaches, the areas we have and the facilities."

I know I leave Northwest in good hands," Miller said. "I know that he will get along with the athletes, and they will be well taken care of."

The trip is scheduled for Tuesday, Aug. 25, to see "West Side Story." Cost for the trip is $12 per person which includes an Arena One ticket (a $10 value) and transportation on the University's Bearcat busses.

The busses will be leaving Horace Mann parking lot (center of the campus) at 6 p.m. for the nonstop trip to Starlight Theater. Curtain time for the show is 8:30 p.m.

The first 40 reservations will be accepted for the trip, Annette Lowman, coordinator of residential life, said.

Union to sponsor State Fair trip

Marvin Silliman, director of the J.W. Jones Student Union at Northwest, has announced the Union will sponsor a bus trip to the Missouri State Fair in Sedalia on Saturday, Aug. 22, if there is sufficient interest.

He said the bus is scheduled to leave the University campus at 7 a.m. and start the return trip from the fair grounds at about 10 p.m. Cost is $10 per person and includes only transportation.

Interested persons should contact the Union Director's Office as soon as possible to make reservations.

Ad Building anniversary reflected upon

Today marks the two-year anniversary of the Administration Building fire that damaged five key academic departments and many administrative offices.

At 8 p.m. July 24, fire and smoke raged through the Administration Building, causing extensive damage. The fire gutted the west wing of the building, where it started. The Frank Deerwester Theater was also totally destroyed.

What seemed devastating at the time, President B.D. Owens said, actually unified the University.

"The Administration Building fire proved the solidarity and willingness of the University students, administration, faculty and staff, not to mention the townspeople," he said. "The fire actually enabled us to take a tremendous step forward."

This tremendous step is now in the form of construction.

"Right now, the separation of administrative offices is a problem," Owens said. "We hope to have all of the offices back in the Ad building by this time next year."

Owens said the fire has made time more precious. He said that the construction sometimes makes walking through campus a problem, but he believes the rewards from the construction will make up for it.

"The students have been tremendous throughout all the problems that the fire created," Owens said. "We're all into the pattern now. The fire, as terrible as it was, pulled us all together. We've just got to keep that unity now."

Summertime--keeping healthy the fun way

Exercise, recreation plentiful

Summertime has always been a time for fun and recreation and oftentimes the two are combined.

Maryville pools are always crowded with divers, sunbathers and swimmers on hot summer days. Early morning and late evening cool temperatures bring out the tennis players.

Jogging and bicycling are two forms of exercise, recreation and transportation that can always be seen on Maryville streets and sidewalks.

Even for Northwest students, summer is not a time for all study and no play. Warm temperatures invite recreation. Summer weather brings out the kid in everyone.
